BOARD OF TRADE MEETING

At the first regular monthly meeting of the Board of Trade since the launching of the membership drive, held Monday evening at the City hall, Dean Shaw, chairman of the Drive committee, reported the doubling of the active membership of the organization as a result of the campaign.

The committee's report, recommending the appointment of teams of members to push the drive to a whirlwind finish, was adopted by unanimous vote. President W. W. Alley, presiding officer, then called for volunteers and appointed as team captains Dean Shaw, Earl D. Topping, James N. Hawks, Louis Dietz, Glen Palmer, Louis Brooks, A. M. Udell, Arthur Johnson, Jr., O. E. Seng, Geo. Oswald, Woodson Jones, Carlton J. Pegler, W. S. Hull and C. W. Forman.

Each team captain was assigned a different section of the city with instructions to draft as many team mates as necessary and to call personally upon individual property owners in an endeavor to enlist them in support of the movement for a greater Sierra Madre through the acquisition of a larger share of the constant influx of homeseekers to the Southland.

At the request of the president of the Board of Trade Mr. Glen Palmer addressed the members upon the necessity of providing additional hotel accommodation for the entertainment of visitors. Mr. Palmer presented a plan worked out in detail for the erection by popular subscription of a combination hotel and glorified bungalow court to provide private living quarters for forty families as well as ample accommodations for transients.

An architect's drawing, or "aero-plane view," of the contemplated structure, an adaptation of the Spanish presidio or communal dwelling, to be erected in the form of a hollow rectangle, was displayed showing the enclosed space, or patio, 300 by 600 feet, laid out as a garden and grounds for communal recreation purposes.

Additional features of the structure would be a community dining-room; assembly hall, and space for several stores or shops. It was urged in favor of the plan that some sort of an application of the cooperative idea whereby a duplication of labor and building could be avoided offered the best and speediest solution of the servant and housing problems now acute throughout the country and, further, that such an edifice would not only be a monument of combined utility and grace to Sierra Madre, but would become a magnet for visitors to Southern California similar to the Mission Inn at Riverside, famous all over the country.

At the conclusion of Mr. Palmer's remarks a motion was carried unanimously instructing President Alley to appoint a committee of five members to develop the project.

Mr. Louis Brooks, chairman of the committee charged with the placing of a sign bearing the city's name at the junction of Sierra Madre avenue and Foothill boulevard, reported preparations complete for the erection of the sign. A difference of opinion, however, having developed at the meeting as to the proper wording to be used, it was resolved that a contest be instituted and a prize offered for a fitting slogan for Sierra Madre setting forth the manifold charms of the city most forcibly in the fewest number of words. Among the slogans suggested by members were:

"The City of Homes."
"At the Foot of Mt. Wilson."
And "In the Zone of Ozone."
The public is invited to send their "slogans" to the secretary, James N. Hawks.

The invitation to join the League of the Southwest was laid on the table.

CITRUS PRUNING DEMONSTRATION AT SIERRA MADRE

The Farm Bureau center of Sierra Madre-Monrovia-Duarte has invited all citrus growers to attend a citrus pruning demonstration Tuesday, June 22, at 2 p. m. It will be held at the Yerxa ranch, corner of Baldwin avenue and Live Oak, Sierra Madre.

Robert W. Hodgson, farm advisor for Los Angeles county, assisted by V. F. Blanchard, assistant farm advisor, will be present to conduct the demonstration. The method of pruning which will be demonstrated is the one recommended by the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau as the most rational system now known. It will be well worth while to every citrus grower to attend this demonstration.

EXHIBITION OF MINIATURES

Miss Ella Shepard Bush is exhibiting sixteen of her miniature paintings at the Museum of History, Science and Art, Exposition Park, Los Angeles, until June 20. The exhibit is attracting a great deal of attention and favorable criticism.

MEN'S COMMUNITY CLUB MEETING THURSDAY NIGHT

The regular meeting of the Men's Community club at the Congregational church next Thursday night, June 17, will be of unusual interest.

The speakers at the last few meetings have given good, solid, serious lectures, but the one at this one, Mr. James W. Foley, poet-humorist, will uncork a few laughs for a change. Mr. Foley, of the Pasadena Evening Post, has a reputation for keeping his audience entertained and cheerful from his quaint, witty introduction to the last funny story.

Good music as usual. You'll miss a real treat if you fail to attend. Program begins at 8 p. m. and the ladies as well as non-members are invited to attend. No admission fee.

The regular dinner will be served at 6:30 sharp and all members, with their guests, are urged to be on time as a delay in starting the dinner disarranges the schedule of the later program.

Every member is urged to attend and bring a friend, but do not neglect to phone your plate reservation to Rudolph Hartman, Black 25, or to George Norris, Black 12, not later than next Tuesday, as the ladies must have the "nose count" by that time.

WIN THE PRIZE

The Board of Trade voted to give a prize to the person who would submit a slogan or catch phrase to be put on the big sign board to be erected on the Foothill boulevard at the foot of Sierra Madre avenue.

The effort should be directed toward a short sentence referring to Sierra Madre in a way that the occupants of passing automobiles will be impressed and remember. Brevity will count in the judging, as but a few words can be read at a 300-mile speed. Make it brief, but make it stick. Send your slogans to James N. Hawks, secretary.

FARM ADVISOR HODGSON TO DISCUSS "JUNE DROP"

There is perhaps no single subject concerning citrus culture which is of more interest to citrus growers at this season of the year than "June Drop." Even though a citrus tree might set a large crop of fruit which remains on the tree for some time, there is the possibility of most of the fruit dropping. This drop usually comes in June which has resulted in it being called "June drop," although it sometimes comes in July.

The Farm Bureau of Monrovia-Duarte-Sierra Madre is to hold a meeting Tuesday June 22, at 7:30 p. m. at the Monrovia High school auditorium. Farm Advisor R. W. Hodgson will discuss "June Drop of Citrus: Its Causes and Prevention." Dr. J. G. Biller, Director of the Pomona Farm Bureau center, will give a short talk on the Farm Bureau Conference Trip, which he attended. Music will be furnished by the Farm Bureau orchestra.

All who are interested in agriculture are invited to attend this meeting.

PARENT-TEACHER MEETING

The Parent-Teacher association held their final meeting for the year on Wednesday with a large number of mothers and friends present.

After a short business session a musical program was given which included a whistling duet by Mrs. James G. Norris and Miss Edith Evans, accompanied by Mrs. Norris on the piano; bugle calls on the cornet by Mrs. Homer Glidden and several delightful selections on the piano by Mrs. George B. Morridge.

Following this musical treat, the president, Mrs. W. S. Hull, introduced the speaker, Mr. H. E. Long, of this city, who has been in Y. M. C. A. overseas service for a year, principally on the transports.

He confined his talk mostly to interesting descriptions of various English and continental towns which he visited, and impressions of conditions in both England and France.

He exhibited a number of very interesting souvenirs of the late war.

Installation of officers for the new year took place, after which everyone joined in singing patriotic songs.

Delicious cake and punch were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Roy Edwards and Mrs. T. Henderson.

HELP THE NEEDY

The city nurse, Miss Brewington, needs your old papers, old magazines, rags, old clothes and new pieces of materials suitable for making quilts and comforters for the needy.

Either bring them or phone her and she will send for them. Many thanks for past favors.

There is news on every page

CELEBRATES GOLDEN WEDDING

Col. and Mrs. W. H. Holabird celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last Wednesday with a family party of children and grandchildren at their home on Sturtevant Road.

After a sumptuous wedding dinner the party drove to the beach at the mouth of Topanga Canyon, where the younger members enjoyed surf bathing. Upon the return from their trip the bride and groom were the least tired and while the others sat around resting the colonel donned overalls and put in an hour or two irrigating the garden.

The bride's cake was made by the same bride from the same recipe as that made on a similar occasion fifty years ago. A granddaughter, little Jane, aged 11, put on her grandmother's wedding dress, which was three inches too large around the waist.

Numerous floral offerings were sent by friends and neighbors and altogether everybody had a splendid, happy time.

Col. W. H. Holabird has been prominent in California affairs for many years. He was receiver for the California Development company untangling the gigantic financial affairs of this big Imperial valley development project, finally throwing the business back to the company in a good healthy condition.

He also served with credit as chairman of the exemption board of the Los Angeles district. He has always taken a keen interest and active part in Sierra Madre affairs, having served as city trustee, and is at present on the board of school trustees.

The guests, who will visit for another week, are:

R. D. Holabird, son, of Berkeley, his wife and two daughters, Muriel and Jane; H. G. Holabird, a son, of Los Angeles, wife and four children, Elizabeth, William H., Jr., Russell and Timothy; Emeline Holabird, a daughter, who makes her home here.

JOKE ON THE EDITOR

For a year and a half The News has been hovering for street lights, better streets, a comfort station, more paint, on buildings, a free camping ground, a service men's memorial, a better water system and a city park, but the chief pet ambition of the editor was a park and comfort station, and we almost got them last year when a committee was appointed and two members of it visited Monrovia and

"took notes," but the chairman was "agin" the idea so the report was probably shoved in the pigeonhole containing the dope on the memorial tablet for which over $350 was appropriated a year ago.

When old Sierra Madre does decide to get a move on she sure can hump some—but that's another story.

All this city park stuff was thrown in our face yesterday when a serious joker poked his head in the door and said, "Well, Mr. Editor, I see they have begun work on the new city park." "Whadda y' mean, city park?" sez we, and grabbing our hat, hurried up by the Sierra Madre Garage and sure enough, J. C. Whyte was loading his big truck with dirt from the bank, but in answer to our excited inquiry said it was to be used in a new building, and there was nothing doing on the park thing.

Well, anyway, that city lot could be converted from an eyesore to a beauty spot for a few fifty-cent dollars, and we are not yet sure if the joke is on the editor or the public.

POSTMASTER REAPPOINTED

Postmaster Morridge has just received word that the U. S. Senate has confirmed his reappointment to the office. It is now the policy of the postoffice department to retain in office postmasters whose services are satisfactory. When vacancies occur by reason of death, resignations or other causes the place is filled as a result of civil service examination.

Mr. Morridge is an efficient and courteous official and the public, as well as himself, is to be congratulated upon his reappointment.

MR. TWYCCROSS IMPROVING

S. R. G. Twycross is still confined to his bed as a result of injuries received last Friday when a Santa Fe engine struck him at the Santa Anita station.

Besides cuts on the head he suffered bruises on the arms, legs and body, the most severe being in his back.

He is getting along fine, however, and expects to be up and about again soon. Meanwhile his friends are congratulating him that he was not killed outright.

BIT OF ALL RIGHT

Our City keeps on gaining Added favor with the mass;
With desire of home attaining,
No one likes its charm to pass.
One somehow claims protection
By the grim Sierras near;
And in each and all direction,
Brightest flowers offer cheer.
Never dreading depth of snow,
Winter's change is welcomed gladly
Blizzards do not freeze and blow
For residents of Sierra Madre.
—A. L. Soran.

Wantads

Everybody has something about the place that they do not use or need. Perhaps a chair, table, couch, stove, hoe, rake, spade, tools, old iron, old clothes, books, poultry, rabbits or a lot of other things.

Why don't you sell them? A lot of other people want just those things and a wantad will get you together.

You'd be surprised if you knew how many people read the wantads in the News FIRST—looking for bar-

Fritters

A Daily Recipe by Delmonico's Chef (Apricot Fritters)

Mix one-half a pound of flour with one tablespoonful of oil or melted butter, a grain of salt, two eggs (add one after the other), one ounce of sugar. Dilute gradually with one and a half teacups of cold milk. When about to use the batter, mix therewith one and a half tablespoonfuls of baking powder.

Take some half preserved apricots, dry them on a napkin and sprinkle with flour. Dip them in batter and fry in hot fat. Drain on a napkin. Set the fritters on a tray, cover them with powdered sugar and glaze in a hot oven. Serve at once. (Proceed in precisely the same way for apples, pears, peaches, pineapples or banana fritters.)

Why Brunswick Tires Win Preference

There are two main reasons—one, the name itself, which certifies superfine value—the other, that time tells the same story.

Thus reputation and performance unite in giving you all you expect—and more.

Yet Brunswicks cost no more than like-type tires. Many motorists would pay more readily, but the Brunswick idea is to GIVE the utmost, rather than to GET the utmost. And this has been true since 1845. You can appreciate what Brunswick Standards mean by trying ONE Brunswick Tire. It will be a revelation. You'll agree that you could not buy a better, regardless of price.

And, like other motorists, you'll decide to have ALL Brunswicks. Then you'll know supreme satisfaction from your tires—longer life, minimum trouble, lower cost.

"CRAZY—LIKE A FOX."

Synopsis.—Pioneer in the California redwood region, John Cardigan, at forty-seven, is the leading citizen of Sequoia, owner of mills, ships, and many acres of timber, a widower after three years of married life, and father of two-day old Bryce Cardigan. The redwood, with its cousin the sequoia, is the oldest and biggest thing on earth. It grows nowhere but in California. Most of the redwoods have gone; those remaining are apparently doomed to the ax and saw. The sequoias are safe to future generations in Sequoia and Yosemite National parks. The "Save the Redwoods League" has been organized with the purpose of establishing a Redwoods National park.

CHAPTER II—Continued.

Of all their adventures together, however, those which occurred on their frequent excursions up to the Valley of the Giants impressed themselves imperishably upon Bryce's memory. How well he remembered their first trip, when, seated astride his father's shoulders with his sturdy little legs around Cardigan's neck and his chubby little hands clasping the old man's ears, they had gone up the abandoned skid-road and into the semi-darkness of the forest, terminating suddenly in a shower of sunshine that fell in an open space where a boy could roll and play and never get dirty. Bryce looked forward with eagerness to those frequent trips with his father "to the place where Mother dear went to heaven."

When Bryce was six years old, his father sent him to the public school in Sequoia with the children of his loggers and mill-hands, thus laying the foundation for a democratic education all too infrequent with the sons of men rated as millionaires. Bryce's boyhood was much the same as that of other lads in Sequoia, save that in the matter of toys and later guns, fishing-rods, dogs and ponies he was a source of envy to his fellows. After his tenth year his father placed him on the mill payroll, and on pay-day he was wont to line up with the mill-crew to receive his modest stipend of ten dollars for carrying in kindling to the cook in the mill kitchen each day after school.

This otherwise needless arrangement was old Cardigan's way of teaching his boy financial responsibility.

When Bryce Cardigan was about fourteen years old there occurred an important event in his life. In a commendable effort to increase his income he had laid out a small vegetable garden in the rear of his father's house, and here on a Saturday morning, while down on his knees weeding carrots, he chanced to look up and discovered a young lady gazing at him through the picket fence. She was a few years his junior, and a stranger in Sequoia. Ensued the following conversation: "Hello, little boy."

"Hello, Little Boy."

"Hello yourself! I ain't a little boy."

She ignored the correction. "What are you doing?"

"Weeding carrots. Can't you see?"

"What for?"

Bryce, highly incensed at having been designated a little boy by this superior damsel, saw his opportunity to silence her. "Cat's fur for kitten breeches," he retorted—without any evidence of originality, we must confess, and for the space of several minutes gave all his attention to his crop. And presently the visitor spoke again. "I like your hair, little boy. It's a pretty red."

That settled the issue between them. To be hailed as little boy was bad enough, but to be reminded of his crowning misfortune was adding insult to injury. He rose and cautiously approached the fence with the intention of pinching the impudent stranger, suddenly and surreptitiously, and sending her away weeping. As his hand crept between the palings on its wicked mission, the little miss looked at him in friendly fashion and queried: "What's your name?"

Bryce's hand hesitated. "Bryce Cardigan," he answered gruffly.

"I'm Shirley Sumner," she ventured. "Let's be friends."

"When did you come to live in Sequoia?" he demanded.

"I don't live here. I'm just visiting here with my aunt and uncle. We're staying at the hotel, and there's nobody to play with. My uncle's name is Pennington. So's my aunt's. He's out here buying timber, and we live in Michigan."

Her gaze wandered past Bryce to where his Indian pony stood with her head out of the window of her box-stall contemplating her master.

"Oh, what a dear little horse!" Shirley Sumner exclaimed. "Whose is he?"

"Tain't a he. It's a she. And she belongs to me."

"Do you ride her?"

"Not very often now. I'm getting too heavy for her, so Dad's bought me a horse that weighs nine hundred pounds. Midget only weighs five hundred." He considered her a moment while she gazed in awe upon this man with two horses. "Can you ride a pony?" he asked, for no reason that he was aware of.

She sighed, shaking her head resignedly. "We haven't any room to keep a pony at our house in Detroit," she explained, and added hopefully: "But I'd love to ride Midget. I suppose I could learn to ride if somebody taught me how."

He looked at her again. At that period of his life he was inclined to regard girls as a necessary evil. For some immutable reason they existed, and perforce must be borne with, and it was his hope that he would get through life and see as little as possible of the exasperating sex. Nevertheless, as Bryce surveyed this winsome miss through the palings, he was sensible of a sneaking desire to find favor in her eyes—also equally sensible of the fact that the path to that desirable end lay between himself and Midget.

"Well, I suppose if you want a ride I'll have to give it to you," he grumbled, "although I'm pretty busy this morning."

"Oh, I think you're so nice," she declared.

A thrill shot through him that was akin to pain; with difficulty did he restrain an impulse to dash wildly into the stable and saddle Midget in furious haste. Instead he walked to the barn slowly and with extreme dignity. When he reappeared, he was leading Midget, a little silverpoint runt of a Klamath Indian pony, and Moses, a sturdy pinto cayuse from the cattle ranges over in Trinity county. "I'll have to ride with you," he announced. "Can't let a tenderfoot like you go out alone on Midget."

All adutter with delightful anticipation, the young lady climbed up on the gate and scrambled into the saddle when Bryce swung the pony broadside to the gate. Two hours of his valuable time did he give that morning before the cull of duty brought him back to the house and his neglected crop of carrots. When he suggested tactfully, however, that it was now necessary that his guest and Midget separate, a difficulty arose. Shirley Sumner refused point blank to leave the premises. She liked Bryce for his hair and because he had been so kind to her; she was a stranger in Sequoia, and now that she had found an agreeable companion, it was far from her intention to desert him.

So Miss Sumner stayed and helped Bryce weed his carrots, and since as a voluntary laborer she was at least worth her board, at noon Bryce brought her in to Mrs. Tully with a request for luncheon. When he went to the mill to carry in the kindling for the cook, the young lady returned rather sorrowfully to the Hotel Sequoia, with a fervent promise to see him the next day. She did, and Bryce took her for a long ride up into the Valley of the Giants and showed her his mother's grave. They put some flowers on the grave, and when they returned to town and Bryce was unsaddling the ponies, Shirley drew Midget's nose down to her and kissed it. Then she commenced to weep rather violently.

"What are you crying about?" Bryce demanded. Girls were so hard to understand.

"I'm go-going h-h-h-home tomorrow," she howled.

He was stricken with dismay and bade her desist from her vain repinings. But her heart was broken, and somehow—Bryce appeared to act automatically—he had his arm around her. "Don't cry, Shirley," he pleaded. "It breaks my heart to see you cry. Do you want Midget? I'll give her to you."

Between sobs Shirley confessed that the prospect of parting with him and not Midget was provocative of her woe. This staggered Bryce and pleased him immensely. And at parting she kissed him good-bye, reiterating her opinion that he was the nicest, kindest boy she had ever met or hoped to meet.

When Shirley and her uncle and aunt boarded the steamer for San Francisco, Bryce stood disconsolate on the dock and waved to Shirley until he could no longer discern her on the deck. He thought of his elfin companion very frequently for a week, and he lost his appetite, very much to Mrs. Tully's concern. Then the steelhead trout began to run in Eel river, and the sweetest event that had occurred in any boy's existence—the sudden awakening to the wonder and beauty of life so poignantly realized in his first love-affair—was lost sight of by Bryce. In a month he had forgotten the incident; in six months he had forgotten Shirley Sumner.

CHAPTER III.

Throughout the happy years of Bryce's boyhood his father continued to enlarge and improve his sawmill, to build more schooners, and to acquire more redwood timber. Lands, the purchase of which by Cardigan a decade before had caused his neighbors to impugn his judgment, now developed strategical importance. As a result those lands necessary to consolidate his own holdings came to him at his own price, while his adverse holdings that blocked the logging operations of his competitors went from him—also at his own price. In fact, all well-laid plans matured satisfactorily with the exception of one, and since it has a very definite bearing on the story, the necessity for explaining it is paramount.

Contiguous to Cardigan's logging operations to the east and north of Sequoia, and comparatively close in, lay a block of two thousand acres of splendid timber, the natural, feasible, and inexpensive outlet for which, when it should be logged, was the Valley of the Giants. For thirty years John Cardigan had played a waiting game with the owner of that timber, for the latter was as fully obsessed with the belief that he was going to sell it to John Cardigan at a dollar and a half per thousand feet stumpage as Cardigan was certain he was going to buy it for a dollar a thousand—when he should be ready to do so and not one second sooner.

Eventually the time for acquiring more timber arrived. John Cardigan, meeting his neighbor on the street, accosted him thus:

"Look here, Bill, isn't it time we got together on that timber of yours? You know you've been holding it to block me and force me to buy at your figure. I'll give you a dollar a thousand and stumpage for your timber, Bill."

"I want a dollar and a half."

"A dollar is my absolute limit."

"Then I'll keep my timber."

"And I'll keep my money." When I finish logging in my present holdings, I'm going to pull out of that country and log twenty miles south of Sequoia. Remember, Bill, the man who buys your timber will have to log it through my land—and I'm not going to log that quarter-section in the valley. Hence there will be no outlet for your timber in back."

"Not going to log it? Why, what are you going to do with it?"

"I'm just going to let it stay there until I die. When my will is filed for probate, your curiosity will be satisfied—but not until then. Better take a dollar, Bill. It's a good, fair price, as the market on redwood timber is, now, and you'll be making an even hundred per cent. on your investment. Remember, Bill, if I don't buy your timber, you'll never log it yourself and neither will anybody else. You'll be stuck with it for the next forty years—and taxes aren't getting any lower."

"I'll hang on a little longer, I think."

"I think so, too," John Cardigan replied. And that night, as was his wont, even though he realized that it was not possible for Bryce to gain a profound understanding of the business problems to which he was heir, John Cardigan discussed the Squaw creek timber with his son, relating to him the details of his conversation with the owner.

Bryce pondered. "But isn't it cheaper to give him his price on Squaw creek timber than go logging in the San Hedrin and have to build twenty miles of logging railroad to get your logs to the mill?"

"It would be, son, if I had to build the railroad. Fortunately, I do not. I'll just shoot the logs down the hill-side to the San Hedrin river and drive them down the stream to a log-boom on tidewater."

Bryce looked at his father admiringly. "I guess Dan Keyes is right, Dad," he said. "Dan says you're crazy—like a fox. Now I know why you've been picking up claims in the San Hedrin watershed."

"No, you don't, Bryce. I've never told you, but I'll tell you now the real reason. Humboldt coast has no rail connection with the outside world, so we are forced to ship our lumber by water. But some day a railroad will be built in from the south—from San Francisco; and when it comes, the only route for it to travel is through our timber in the San Hedrin valley. I've accumulated that ten thousand acres for you, my son, for the railroad will never be built in my day. It doesn't matter, son. You will still be logging there fifty years from now. And when the railroad people come to you for a right of way, my boy, give it to them. Don't charge them a cent. It has always been my policy to encourage the development of this country, and I want you to be a forward-looking, public-spirited citizen. That's why I'm sending you East to college. You've been born and raised in this town, and you must see more of the world. Listen to me, son. You're only a boy, and you can't understand everything I tell you, but some day understanding will come to you. You mustn't fail the people who work for you—who are dependent upon your strength and brains and enterprise to furnish them with an opportunity for life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. When you are the boss of Cardigan's mill, you must keep the wheels turning; you must never shut down the mill or the logging-camps in dull times just to avoid a loss you can stand better than your employees."

His hand, trembling old hand closed over the boy's. "I want you to be a brave and honorable man," he concluded.

True to his word, when John Cardigan finished his logging in his old, original holdings adjacent to Sequoia and Bill Henderson's Squaw creek timber, he quietly moved south with his Squaw creek woods-gang and joined the crew already getting out logs in the San Hedrin watershed. Not until then did Bill Henderson realize that John Cardigan had called his bluff—whereat he cursed himself for a fool and a poor judge of human nature. He had tried a hold-up game and had failed; a dollar a thousand feet stumpage was a fair price; for years he had needed the money; and now, when it was too late, he realized his error. Luck was with Henderson, however, for shortly thereafter there came again to Sequoia one Colonel Pennington, a millionaire white-pine operator from Michigan. From a chair-warmer on the porch of the Hotel Sequoia, the Colonel had heard the tale of how stiff-necked old John Cardigan had called the bluff of equally stiff-necked Bill Henderson; so for the next few weeks the Colonel, under pretense of going hunting or fishing on Squaw creek, managed to make a fairly accurate cursory cruise of the Henderson timber—following which he purchased it from the delighted Bill for a dollar and a quarter per thousand feet stumpage.

No man is infallible, and in planning his logging operations in the San Hedrin watershed John Cardigan presently made the discovery that he had erred in judgment. That season, from May to November, his woods-crew put thirty million feet of logs into the San Hedrin river, while the mill saved on a reserve supply of logs taken from the last of the old chop-pings adjacent to Squaw creek. That year, however, the rainfall in the San Hedrin country was fifty per cent. less than normal, and by the first of May of the following year Cardigan's woods-crew had succeeded in driving slightly less than half of the cut of the preceding year to the boom on tidewater at the mouth of the river.

"Unless the Lord'll gi' us a lot more water in the river," the woods-boss McTavish complained. "I dinna see how I'm to keep the mill runnin'." He was taking John Cardigan up the river bank and explaining the situation. "The heavy butt-logs has sunk to the bottom," he continued. "Wit a normal head o' water, the lads'll move them, but wif the drapple we have the noo—" He threw up his handlike hands despairingly.

Three days later a cloud-burst filled the river to the brim; it came at night and swept the river clean of Cardigan's clear logs. An army of Jugernauts, they swept down on the boiling torrent to tidewater, reaching the bay shortly after the tide had commenced to ebb.

Now, a chain is only as strong as its weakest link, and a log-boom is a chain of small logs, linked end to end by means of short chains; hence when the van-guard of logs on the lip of that flood reached the log-boom, the impetus of the charge was too great to be resisted. Straight through the weakest link in this boom the huge saw-logs crashed and over Humboldt bar to the broad Pacific. With the ebb tide some of them came back, while others, caught in cross-currents, bobbed about the bay all night and finally beached at widely scattered points. Out of the fifteen million feet of logs less than three million were salvaged, and this task in itself was an expensive operation.

John Cardigan received the news calmly. He turned to the manager and walked away through his logged-over lands, across the little divide and down into the quarter-section of green timber he had told McTavish not to cut. Once in the Valley of the Giants, he followed a well-worn foot-path to the little amphitheater, and where the sunlight filtered through like a halo and fell on a plain little white marble monument, he paused and sat down on the now almost decayed sugar-pine windfall.

"I've come for a little comfort, sweetheart," he murmured to her who slept beneath the stone. Then he leaned back against a redwood tree, removed his hat, and closed his eyes, holding his great gray head the while a little to one side in a listening attitude. Long he sat there, a great, time-bitten devotee at the shrine of his comfort; and presently the hurried look left his strong, kind face and was replaced by a little prescient smile—the sort of smile worn by one who through bitter years has sought something very, very precious and has at length discovered it.

CHAPTER IV.

It was on the day that John Cardigan received the telegram from Bryce saying that, following four years at Princeton and two years of travel abroad, he was returning to Sequoia to take over his redwood heritage—that he discovered that a stranger and not the flesh of his flesh and the blood of his blood was to reap the reward of his fifty years of endeavor.

For a long time he sat there lethargic with misery. Eventually he roused himself, reached for the desk telephone, and pressed a button on the office exchange-station. His manager, one Thomas Sinclair, answered.

"Thomas," he said calmly, "you know, of course, that Bryce is coming home. Tell George to take the big car and go over to Red Bluff for him."

George Sea Otter, son of Bryce Cardigan's old half-breed nurse, was a person in whose nature struggled the white's predilection for advertisement and civic pride and the red man's instinct for adornment. For three years he had been old man Cardigan's chauffeur and man-of-all-work about the latter's old-fashioned home, and in the former capacity he drove John Cardigan's single evidence of extravagance—a Napier car, which was very justly regarded by George Sea Otter as the king of automobiles, since it was the only imported car in the county. Upon receipt of orders, therefore, from Sinclair, to drive the Napier over to Red Bluff and meet his future boss and one-time play-fellow, George Sea Otter arrayed himself in a pair of new black corduroy trousers, yellow button shoes, a blue woolen shirt with a large scarlet silk handkerchief tied around the neck, a pair of beaded buckskin gloves with fringe dependent from the gauntlet, and a broad white beaver hat with a rattlesnake-skin band. Across the windshield of the Napier he fastened an orange-colored pennant bearing in bright green letters the legend: MY CITY—SEQUOIA. As a safety-first precaution against man and beast en route, he buckled a gun-sabard to the spare tires on the running-board and slipped a rifle into the scabbard within quick and easy reach of his hand; and arrayed thus, George descended upon Red Bluff at the helm of the king of automobiles.

When the overland train coasted into Red Bluff and slid to a grinding halt, Bryce Cardigan saw that the Highest Living Authority had descended from the train also. He had elected to designate her thus in the absence of any information as to her Christian and family names, and for the further reason that quite obviously she was a very superior person.

By the time the train had stopped, Bryce Cardigan was standing at the door of the hotel, looking out at the car. He saw a woman in a long, dark dress, and he saw a man in a suit. He saw a woman in a long, dark dress, and he saw a man in a suit. He saw a woman in a long, dark dress, and he saw a man in a suit.

Silk for Consistent Hindus.

Muga silk is a product of Assam. Eri silk comes from caterpillars which feed on the castor oil plant. It is of great value in India, because it is the only silk that can be spun from cocoons without killing the insects in the cocoons, and it is therefore the only silk that can be worn by a strict Hindu.

FROM FORTY-FIVE TO SIXTY

A Word of Help to Women of Middle Age From Mrs. Raney.

Morse, Okla.—"When I was 45 years old Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound carried me through the critical period of the Change of Life in safety. I am over 60 and have raised a family of eight children and am in fine health. My daughter and daughters-in-law recommend your Vegetable Compound and I still take it occasionally myself. You are at liberty to use my name if you wish."—Mrs. ALICE RANEY, Morse, Oklahoma.

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. This good old-fashioned root and herb remedy may be relied upon to overcome the distressing symptoms which accompany it and women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to carry women so successfully through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Acid Stomach Makes the Body Sour

Nine Out of Ten People Suffer From It

It sends its harmful acids and gases all over the body, instead of health and strength. Day and night this ceaseless damage goes on. No matter how strong, its victim cannot long withstand the health-destroying effects of an acid stomach.

Good news for millions of sufferers. Chemists have found a sure remedy—one that takes the acid up and carries it out of the body; of course, when the cause is removed, the sufferer gets well.

Bloating, indigestion, sour, acid, gassy stomach miseries all removed. This is proven by over half a million ailing folks who have taken EATONIC with wonderful benefits. It can be obtained from any druggist, who will cheerfully refund its trifling cost if not entirely satisfactory. Everyone should enjoy its benefits. Frequently the first tablet gives relief.

Honey Yield Higher.

The average yield of surplus honey in 1919 was 50 pounds to a colony of honey bees, as estimated by the bureau of crop estimates, United States department of agriculture. This is considerably above average of 45 pounds in 1918, and of 41 6-10 pounds for the five years 1913-1917. The relative proportions in which the honey of the last two years was marketed are indicated by 59 for extracted honey, 31 for comb honey and 10 for bulk honey. About one-third of the product goes to "outside" markets.

The Verdict.

"Do you think my son is now ripe for musical honors?"
"Ripe? No, sir; he's rotten."

It is easier to start a rumor than it is to head it off.

Get Back Your Health

Are you dragging around day after day with a dull headache? Are you tired, and lame mornings—subject to headaches, dizzy spells, and sharp, stabbing pains. Then there's surely something wrong. Probably it's kidney weakness! Don't wait for more serious kidney trouble. Get back your health and keep it. For quick relief get plenty sleep and exercise and use Doan's Kidney Pills. They have helped thousands. Ask your neighbor!

An Idaho Case

Frank Kenney, 89 River St., Wallace, Idaho, says: "My kidneys were out of order and the secretions were too frequent in passage. My back ached constantly through my kidneys. ## PREPARATIONS PROSPECTIVE TOURIST SHOULD MAKE TO INSURE SAFE VOYAGE

Interior of Main Body of Car Arranged for Sleeping Compartment.

Under the title "High, Low and the Game," Edwin L. Sabin, in MoToR, the national magazine of motoring, writes most entertainingly and helpfully of transcontinental motoring and what preparations the prospective tourist should make to insure a safe and pleasant voyage.

"Tires?" questions the author, and answers: "Any driver who starts out equipped with less than a complete outfit of the best new casings that his money will buy gives a hostage to fortune. This may sound a bit extravagant, but I'll leave the decision to the army sky-pilot whom we passed stranded with two bare rims and a family upon the desert 100 miles from any supply station, or to the supposedly experienced traveling man who had been working for 12 hours at a dobe shack trying to adjust a borrowed 33 straight side casing on a 34 clincher wheel, while awaiting succor from a 50-miles-distant garage."

Spade Is Handy Tool.

Gently insinuating that the transcontinental motorist may possibly have to remove a bit of soil on occasion, our author continues: "Spade! Man, man! Don't forget your wife, but for the love of Mike, don't forget a short-handled spade and a couple of boards, likewise a slab or two upon which to base the jack. Where there are miles and miles of sand and shifty gravel, and six inches of either applied just right will stall a car till the grass grows in waste places, it appears idiotic to advise overlanders to pack a spade and adjuncts. Nevertheless a man there was—from Wyoming, too, of all ranges, who seized upon that spade as a great invention."

PAINTING WITH OILCAN DEVICE

Homemade Outfit Similar to One Shown in Illustration Makes Job Very Easy.

IS DIFFICULT WITH BRUSH

When Working on Radiator Place Piece of Paper in Position to Protect Engine and Prevent Spattering Brass Finish.

Painting an automobile radiator quickly and thoroughly with a brush is difficult. A homemade spraying outfit similar to the one shown in the illustration made the job easy.

Make-Up of Outfit.

The outfit consists of a one-half-gallon oil can, made into an atomizer by attaching a tire pump to the end of the pipe B. A piece of small brass pipe, A, was mounted in one side of the can, the upper end of it extending a short distance outside of the top. A second piece of pipe was mounted in a horizontal position in the top of the can, as shown at B. If a handle is attached to the can, as at C, the piece of pipe B may pass through it lengthwise and extend a short distance beyond the end of the handle. Both pipes were soldered to the top of the can, and the screw top was provided with a gasket to make it tight.

Working of Pump.

When the air is forced through the horizontal tube B and caused to pass across the opening in the upper end of the vertical tube A, the liquid in the can is drawn up and forced out in a fine spray. A mixture for spraying the radiator may be made of lampblack and turpentine. A sheet of paper should be placed back of the radiator to protect the engine, and around the outer edge, to prevent the liquid from bespattering the brass finish.—A. E. Andrews, Chicago, in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Cause of Much Trouble.

More troubles can be traced to lack of lubrication than to any other cause.

DEW HAS VITALIZING EFFECT

Abundant Proof That It Possesses Invigorating Action That Affects Growth of Plants.

Dew is vitalizing, not entirely because it is water but because it possesses an invigorating action due partly at any rate to the fact that it is saturated with oxygen, and it has been stated that during its formation peroxide of hydrogen and some ozone are developed. It is not improbable that the peculiarly attractive and refreshing quality that marks the early morning air has its origin in this way. The difficulty of inducing grass to flourish under a tree in full leaf is well known and is generally explained by saying that the tree absorbs the nourishing constituents of the soil or that it keeps the sunlight away from the grass and protects it from rain. It is doubtful whether any of these explanations is true, the real reason most probably being that the vitalizing dew cannot form upon the grass under a tree, whereas as a rule both rain and light can reach it.

Unexplored Libya.

Italian Libya now comprises the two provinces of Tripolitana and Cirenaica and lies along the northern coast of Africa, between Tunis (French) on the west and Egypt on the east, in longitude from about 9 to 23 degrees east. The extremely northerly part of Libya is at about the parallel of latitude 33 degrees north; the southernmost point is unknown, as the territory runs south into the unmapped Sahara indefinitely.

THE WOMAN'S CLUB

By Mrs. Palmer Rhodes.

At the regular meeting of the club on Monday, June 14, the program will be furnished by Mrs. Lillian Burkhardt Goldsmith. Mrs. Goldsmith has not announced just what we may look forward to at this date, but as heretofore on afternoons when she has so charmingly entertained the club, she will make her lecture after having viewed the audience.

Dance

On Friday evening, June 11, there will be an informal dance at the club house, under the direction of the board of directors of the club. All are welcome.

Entertainment

The Drama section of the club, instead of presenting a "May Masque" at the close of the club year, as was anticipated, have decided to postpone this wonderful pageant until the May of 1921, and in the meantime will do extensive preparatory work which will lead up to the success of the "Masque" as the culmination of the efforts of the drama class of next year. It has been decided to put on two one-act plays, at the club house on the evenings of June 21 and 22, and strenuous rehearsals are now in progress. The plays, which are entitled, "Where, but in America?" and "The Florist Shop," are most cleverly written and are very popular, having been recently presented in a number of places. A splendid cast for each play has been secured and will be published later. Rehearsals are under the direction of Mrs. Lillian Burkhardt Goldsmith, assisted by Mrs. Milton Steinberger. Tickets will be on sale Thursday at Hartman's drug store.

MASSACHUSETTS FOLK WILL HOLD PICNIC

All former residents of Massachusetts are invited to the spring picnic Saturday afternoon, June 19, in Sycamore Grove park, Los Angeles.

All are asked to bring baskets for 5 o'clock supper. Hot coffee will be provided but each will bring cup, spoon and supper. There will be an informal program after the supper hour. Those who learn of this are asked to pass it on to other Bay-staters.
